Volvo EX30 vs. Volvo XC40 Recharge Range & Charging Time

With twin motor options giving an estimated range of up to 265 miles,² and the single-motor model boasting an even more impressive 275-mile² estimated electric range, the Volvo EX30 is a solid choice for commuters.

As a pure electric compact SUV, the 2024 Volvo XC40 Recharge also gives you a great budget boost with its EPA-estimated 223-mile range,³ so you can rest assured that your SUV will get you here, there, and everywhere before needing to charge.

The Volvo EX30 single-motor and twin-motor models offer very similar DC fast-charging times, at 26.5 minutes and 28 minutes, respectively. The Volvo XC40 Recharge needs an estimated 37 minutes. Either way, you won't have to wait long for your SUV to charge.

Volvo EX30 Vs. Volvo XC40 Recharge Price

Because the Volvo EX30 is expected to reach dealerships in 2024, we don't have available pricing for all trim levels of this vehicle. However, with a starting price of $34,950 MSRP,¹ we anticipate additional trims will still make the Volvo EX30 a great purchase with an eco-friendly footprint.

The Volvo XC40 Recharge is available starting at $53,550 MSRP¹ or via lease deal with monthly payments. While this electric model does cost more than its Volvo XC40 mild-hybrid counterpart, the Volvo XC40 Recharge gives you the bonus of full-electric fuel economy.
